Hope for the best

Hope is a small but powerful word. We all need it and can share it with others. In this issue of Reach, we encourage you to take charge of your health, stay optimistic, and spread a little hope in your world.

You'll meet two people who bounced back from a diabetes diagnosis with help from experts at Dignity Health—St. Rose Dominican. Read their stories, starting on page 4. We also share why learning you have prediabetes can actually be a good thing. And don't miss our diabetes-specific classes to empower you to live well.

Taking an active role in your health care is empowering. Get tips for communicating with your primary care provider on page 12. And you may not always be able to stay out of the hospital, but you can take steps to avoid a repeat visit. For expert advice, turn to page 13.

We'll also introduce you to two St. Rose Dominican specialists offering relief from leg pain with innovative, same-day surgeries.

Finally, check out "True Neighbors" on page 15. And see why we're so excited to offer full-service neighborhood hospitals in convenient locales!

REACH is published as a community service for the friends and patrons of DIGNITY HEALTH—ST. ROSE DOMINICAN. Information comes from a wide range of medical experts. Have heartburn?

FIVE FOODS TO AVOID

After a meal you feel it—that familiar burn rising in your chest and throat. If you're prone to heartburn, sidestepping certain foods may help turn down the heat. Here are five common offenders you might want to avoid.

Chocolate or mints. Chocolate, peppermint, or spearmint may induce indigestion.

Citrus. Oranges and other citrus fruits and juices can trigger trouble.

.....
Fatty or spicy foods.

Pass on pizza, chili, and foods that are fried, greasy, or made with spices such as curry.

Onions. While they flavor foods, onions may also fan heartburn flames.

.....
Tomato products.

Think tomatoes, tomato sauces, and products such as ketchup.

Beyond diet. Your doctor can tell you about other ways to avoid heartburn episodes.

Why I give

My first experience with hospitals and health care was as a young boy in the first grade.

I was having a lot of unusual pain in my legs in the evenings and at night—so bad that it would keep me awake all night. My parents initially thought the pain was normal; just growing pains. As they massaged my legs at night, they would tell me I was playing very hard and the pain would go away as I grew.

Eventually, the pain, loss of sleep, and disruption to my younger brother caused my parents to seek medical help. Their efforts were financially and emotionally draining. My father was self-employed as a home-delivery milkman. They had no insurance.

We were finally referred to Primary Children's Hospital in Salt Lake City, Utah. This hospital cared for all children in need, no matter their families' ability to pay. I was admitted on my first visit and lived in the hospital for almost two years.

On one of my birthdays, my grandparents gave me a gumball machine that dispensed gum for a penny. I sold the gumballs to the children in the hospital and gave the pennies to the hospital administrator. I thought I was paying for my care.

I have spent almost my entire career in health care trying to pay forward that humankindness—as an orderly while in nursing school, as a nurse, and in support services management.

Dignity Health—St. Rose Dominican has blessed me with the opportunity to fulfill my personal mission of giving back to our patients, employees, and community.

Facing DIABETES

Two stories of HOPE for a HEALTHIER FUTURE

Linda

Takes control with medication and education

Linda Bustamante knew something wasn't right. She was always thirsty, had unexplained bad breath, and was tired all of the time. "I was pretty sure it was diabetes," she says. "It runs on my mother's side of the family." Still, it took the 68-year-old a while to talk to her doctor about her symptoms.

In 2016, Linda saw her primary care physician. He checked her glucose levels while also doing additional testing. Soon after, his nurse called to say the doctor needed to see Linda again.

At her follow-up visit, her doctor explained that she had type 2 diabetes. A healthy glucose level is generally around 70 to 90 mg/dL. Linda's was over 350 mg/dL. "I panicked when I found out how bad it was," Linda says. "My doctor wanted me to see an endocrinologist (a physician who treats disorders of the endocrine system, such as diabetes) right away. My husband and I had two trips planned, so it was a few weeks before I saw him. In the meantime, I was so stressed out that my hair started falling out in clumps."

Learning the ropes with a supportive team

"I was scared," says Linda. "I didn't know what to do or what to avoid, and it's been a really emotional process." Her doctor helped her understand how to monitor and treat her condition, and she now gives herself injections every 24 hours.

Linda's endocrinologist also told her about the variety of diabetes-related programs offered by St. Rose Dominican. And she met with You've probably seen news reports about rising rates of diabetes. But what exactly is diabetes? It's actually a group of diseases characterized by high levels of glucose in the blood, often called blood sugar.

Diabetes means your body has trouble making or using the hormone insulin. Your body needs insulin to help turn the food you eat into energy. If that doesn't happen, sugar (glucose) builds up in your blood. Excessive amounts of blood sugar can harm nerves, blood vessels, and organs and lead to serious problems. Diabetes typically strikes in one of three ways.

Type 1 diabetes

Type 1 usually begins in childhood or young adulthood. It occurs when the body's immune system attacks the cells that make insulin. People with type 1 can't make enough insulin—or any at all. That's why they need to take insulin regularly.

Only about 5 percent of adults diagnosed with diabetes have type 1.

Type 2 diabetes

This is the most common type of diabetes. It was once called adult-onset diabetes, but it's increasingly being found in children.

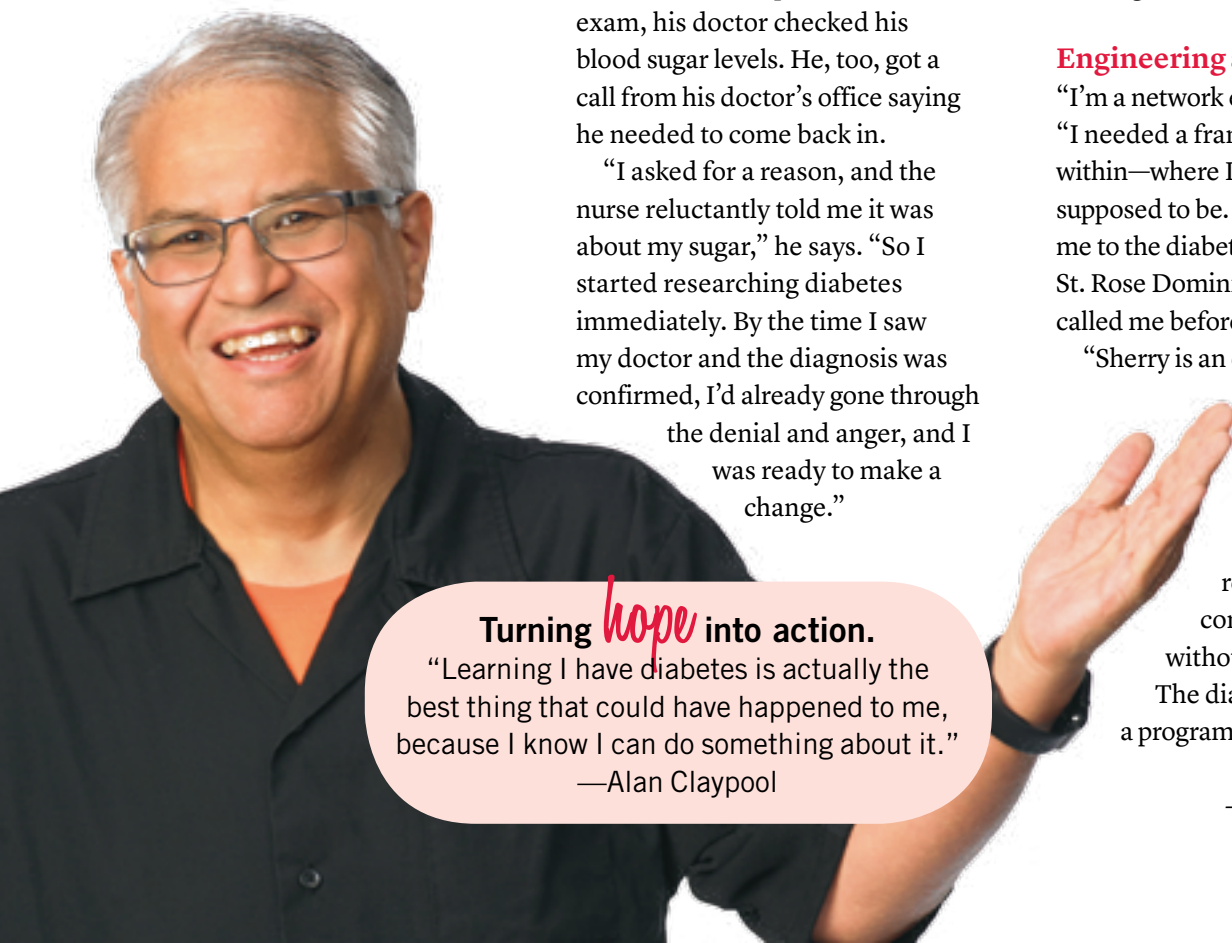

Type 2 occurs when the pancreas doesn't make enough insulin or doesn't use it properly. Genetics, diet, and inactivity are all probable causes. Medicines and sometimes insulin are needed to treat it.

Gestational diabetes

Some women who've never had diabetes before develop it during pregnancy. Gestational diabetes usually resolves once the baby is born. However, it increases the mother's risk for future type 2 diabetes—as well as the baby's risk, if the mother isn't treated.

Alan

Embraces the challenge and a healthier lifestyle

Alan Claypool was diagnosed with type 2 diabetes just over a year ago. Unlike Linda, he did not experience symptoms and had no family history of the disease. As part of a routine exam, his doctor checked his blood sugar levels. He, too, got a call from his doctor's office saying he needed to come back in.

"I asked for a reason, and the nurse reluctantly told me it was about my sugar," he says. "So I started researching diabetes immediately. By the time I saw my doctor and the diagnosis was confirmed, I'd already gone through the denial and anger, and I was ready to make a change."

Turning hope into action.

"Learning I have diabetes is actually the best thing that could have happened to me, because I know I can do something about it."

—Alan Claypool

Alan's levels were not nearly as high as Linda's had been, so he and his doctor talked about making lifestyle changes first, rather than starting medication.

Engineering a path forward

"I'm a network engineer," says Alan. "I needed a framework to work within—where I was and where I was supposed to be. My doctor referred me to the diabetes support team at St. Rose Dominican...they actually called me before I could call them."

"Sherry is an excellent reference and sounding board," he continues. "She gave me the information and resources I needed to control my diabetes without medication."

The diabetes team tailored a program specifically for Alan,

Sherry Poinier, a St. Rose Dominican registered dietitian. “I spent hours with Sherry,” she says. “She showed me what I could eat and how to read labels to help control my diabetes.”

Linda sees her endocrinologist every six to eight weeks and checks in regularly with the diabetes team at St. Rose. Her physician is very pleased with her progress, and tests show her glucose levels are trending closer to normal.

What advice does she have for others? “Pay attention to your body,” says Linda. “If something seems off, get checked. And if you’re serious about getting your numbers down, take classes—learn as much as you can.”

who has lost more than 90 pounds since learning he had diabetes.

“Living with diabetes is all about attitude,” says Alan. “You can look at it as I’m doomed, and there’s nothing I can do about it—or you can be optimistic and embrace it.”

Alan participates in diabetes support groups at St. Rose and gets his bloodwork done there.

“It’s very convenient, inexpensive, and gives me the tools I need to stay on track,” he says. “I eat more salads than I ever imagined I would and fewer burgers, but I actually feel more freedom than I did before the diagnosis.”

Diagnosis, prediabetes

3 REASONS WHY THAT’S GOOD NEWS

- 1. You just found out you don’t have type 2 diabetes. That’s good. Diabetes is a potentially dangerous disease. Still, your blood sugar is higher than normal—the definition of prediabetes. If your blood sugar continues to rise, you’ll eventually be diagnosed with type 2 diabetes.
- 2. You know you have prediabetes. Most people with prediabetes don’t have any symptoms, so they don’t know they’re at increased risk for type 2 diabetes. But now you’re aware of your risk.
- 3. You can turn things around. There’s a lot you can do to bring your blood sugar down and help prevent full-blown diabetes. For example, if you’re overweight, dropping 5 to 10 percent of your weight can prevent or even reverse prediabetes.

Working well with your primary care doctor can matter so much

Your doctor is an expert on human health. But even with all that expertise, your doctor needs to know the details of your unique medical health and history to give you the best possible care.

“It’s so important to have a strong working relationship with your primary care doctor that is based on open communication,” says Joseph Johnson, MD, a family medicine physician at Dignity Health Medical Group Nevada’s new Pavilion clinic.

There for you in sickness and health

For most people, the main doctor-patient relationship is with a primary care physician. Among other things, these doctors:

- Diagnose medical problems
- Treat a variety of illnesses and conditions
- Coordinate your care with other specialists, if needed
- Help patients learn how to care for their own health
- Help prevent health problems from occurring

Types of primary care doctors include:

- Family physicians, who are trained to care for people of all ages—from babies to older adults
- Internal medicine physicians, who focus on medical conditions faced by adult patients
- Pediatricians, who care for newborns, infants, children, teens, and even young adults

Take an active role in your care

Inna Zdorovyak, MD, another family medicine doctor at the Dignity Health Medical Group’s Pavilion clinic, offers these tips for communicating well with your doctor for better care:

Be prepared. Before your next doctor’s visit, take a little time to get ready. Gather your medications—including any over-the-counter drugs or herbal or alternative remedies that you take—and bring them with you to the doctor’s office.

Speak up. During your visit, tell your doctor about your symptoms and anything else you think he or she

Heading home—and staying there

Back so soon? These probably aren't the words most people want to hear when checking into a hospital. Yet some patients do return for another hospital stay weeks or months after being discharged for the same or a related health condition.

"We're working hard to reduce readmissions," says Maggie Ozan Rafferty, DHA, RN, chief experience officer for Dignity Health—St. Rose Dominican.

"We want to ensure people have the information they need, so they can recover well and stay healthy once they go home."

3 steps to avoid a return trip to the hospital

1. Understand your discharge instructions.

If any aspect of your care isn't clear, ask the staff to clarify. Be sure to get written instructions as well.

2. Fill your prescriptions—and keep any follow-up appointments. Do the same with any lab work or other tests you need.

3. Know who to call. Ask what symptoms you might need to watch for—and who to call if you start to have new or worsening symptoms.

Find the support you need. If you're living with a new or chronic health condition, check out the various classes and programs we have to help—starting on page 7.

needs to know. For instance, be sure to mention when your symptoms started, how often they occur, and how long they last.

Listen carefully—and ask questions. It can be a good idea to repeat what's said in your own words so you're sure you understand. If you're confused, don't hesitate to ask questions.

If your doctor recommends medication, ask how to take it and about possible side effects. If he or she suggests surgery or a treatment, be sure you understand why you need it and the risks and benefits.

If you have a condition that has a number of treatment options, ask about the pros and cons of each one.

Use the checklist form at right. It can help you prepare for doctor visits and calls to your doctor's office.

St. Rose doctors treat leg pain with same-day surgery

If you're living with leg pain, you might chalk it up to getting older. But leg pain can be caused by a variety of things, including poor blood circulation.

Poor leg circulation isn't actually a condition itself. It results from other health problems, including obesity, diabetes, atherosclerosis (narrowed arteries), multiple pregnancies, and long-term standing. Poor circulation in the lower body can lead to:

- Tired, heavy, achy legs
- Cramping or calf pain that occurs with walking even short distances
- Varicose veins
- Leg or ankle swelling and skin discoloration
- Leg or foot ulcers

Going with the flow

Two cardiologists at St. Rose Dominican's Rose de Lima

Campus in Henderson are working together to provide comprehensive care for patients with poor leg circulation. When arteries or veins narrow and become blocked, they can use minimally invasive procedures to help get blood flowing well again.

If a patient has a blockage in the arteries that take blood from the heart down to the toes, Branavan Umakanthan, DO, FACC, FSCAI, a board-certified interventional cardiologist, performs a balloon angioplasty. This involves inserting a small balloon into the artery to open the blockage.

For blockage in a vein that takes blood from the toes back up to the heart, another specialist steps in. Sunil Kalla, MD, FACC, another board-certified interventional cardiologist, performs a different procedure that places a stent in the leg vein so blood can flow freely again. As Dr. Kalla says, "Dr. Umakanthan goes north to south (heart to toes) while I go south to north (toes to heart)."

Both procedures take about an hour, and people typically return home within four hours.

So much better!

"Most patients see swelling improve by 70 to 80 percent within a few weeks," Dr. Kalla says. Their quality of life is significantly improved, too. They are able to walk comfortably again and be more independent, Drs. Kalla and Umakanthan say.

For hope and healing. If you have leg pain or other problems, find a doctor who can help at StRoseHospitals.org or by calling 702.616.4900.

Seeing is relieving

Dr. Umakanthan and Dr. Kalla have been using advanced technologies to open leg arteries for several years. Dr. Umakanthan is an international-level speaker in this field.

Dr. Kalla was also the first physician in the state of Nevada to use intravascular ultrasound-guided pelvic stent placement. It allows the doctor to weave a tiny camera into veins to measure and fix blockage or compression. "It's like taking a picture of the vein from the inside," he says. "I can see if there is a blockage and insert a stent immediately."

True neighbors

We're ready to deliver the hospital care you need, close to home

It's been an exciting summer for Dignity Health—St. Rose Dominican and for various areas of the valley, including North Las Vegas, Blue Diamond, and West Flamingo. New St. Rose Dominican neighborhood hospitals have opened in all three of these areas to provide medical care and emergency services. An additional hospital will open late this year on West Sahara.

To bring these convenient neighborhood facilities to Las Vegas, Dignity Health—St. Rose Dominican partnered with Emerus, the nation's innovative leader in building and operating micro hospitals.

Close by—and full service

Besides being convenient for area residents, each hospital offers calm, soothing environments and personalized patient experiences. The hospitals are staffed by ER-trained, board-certified physicians, experienced nurses, and other clinical specialists dedicated to providing the same level of compassionate, patient-focused care found at St. Rose Dominican's existing hospitals. What else you can expect:

- Fast emergency care
- On-site imaging and lab services to help patients receive timely diagnoses
- Attentive, around-the-clock nursing care, if an overnight stay is needed

We're here for you. For information on the four new hospitals or to schedule an estimated emergency room arrival time, visit StRoseNH.org.

Spread hope in your world

We can each make the world a kinder, brighter place with our everyday actions. With the holiday season ahead, it's a good time to think about how we can spread a little hope to others.

Here are some ideas to inspire you to make a difference, even in the smallest ways.

Share something hopeful. Tell someone about a charitable cause that's doing good work. Post or share an upbeat news story.

Say, "I believe in you." Encourage someone who's working toward a goal. Let them know that you see them succeeding.

Reach out to someone who seems to be struggling. Ask, "What can I do now to help and support you?" Let them know you care and you're there to listen.

Offer a helping hand. Maybe you know a family caregiver or elderly neighbor who could use help with tasks or errands.

Connect with a friend face-to-face. Online friends are fine, but it's not the same as giving real hugs or taking soup to someone who's sick.

Express regret. If you're truly sorry for something you said or did to someone, apologize. Take responsibility without excuses.

Do acts of humankindness. Hold the door for someone. Buy a stranger a cup of coffee. Leave extra coins at the laundry. Donate used books to a shelter or nursing home.

Expect good things to happen. You'll feel more optimistic and hopeful—and that's sure to lift up those around you, too.

Be hope on wheels
